

Twelve Hundred Years of Caring!

Trinity Hospital is one of Leicester's oldest Charities being founded in 1331 by the Duke of Lancaster to provide housing for older people in the Newarke. The 'old' Trinity Almshouse is now an administration building for the De Montfort University and Trinity relocated to a purpose built modern sheltered housing scheme in Western Boulevard in 1994.

The Trustees of Trinity Hospital and Governors of Wyggestons Hospital are pleased to announce that following long discussions, it has been agreed that the two Charities will work in a collaborative arrangement going forward.

It is felt that this will ensure the continued success of the activities of these two long established charities both of which are members of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Sandra Powell, Chairman of the Wyggeston board of Governors said "With a combined 1200 years of caring between the two Charities, we look forward to carrying on the successes already achieved."
